The BFGoodrich CAMS Australian Off Road Championship reaches its climax this weekend as Australia's best off roaders head to rainbow for the final round.

After two rounds of thrilling action and dramatic results, a number of competitors find themselves in contention to take out the prestigious title.

With the Hindmarsh Shire Rainbow Desert Enduro having almost double the amount points available than the opening two rounds, drivers as low as 30th on the standings have a mathematical chance to win the championship.

The big story coming out though is the withdrawal of Stephen Graham. Currently occupying third place outright, Graham was on the verge of producing a stunning result and securing a shock podium finish in the Sportslite.

Ahead of the final round, aorc.com/cams has a look at some of the top contenders and what needs to happen for them to win the 2019 BFGoodrich CAMS Australian Off Road Champion.
